

Table of Contents

---

Table of contents	iii
Acknowledgments	v
Foreword	Viii
 Part one: Elements of theory
Introduction	9
I Why shall we study reflexivity in psychotherapy?	22
II What is a reflection-in-action?	32
III The founding theories of qualitative methods	66
IV Beyond linearity: Family therapy and qualitative research	81
V Qualitative research: From birth to individuation	90
VI Guidelines for a qualitative methodology	106
VII The interview process	121
VIII Interpreting qualitative data	139
IX Resistances, choices and issues of selection	145
X On knowledge	152
 Part two: Interviews and findings
Overview of the Interviews: how therapists think in action?	159
XI First interview: About reflection-in-action	162
Interviews at the training institute: Interview and analysis	163
XII Preparation of the interviews at the training institute	178
Second interview	183
Third interview	197
Fourth interview	204
Fifth interview	208
Sixth interview	212
Seventh interview	216
Eighth interview	219
Ninth interview	223
Tenth interview	226
XIII Interviews with the expert therapists:
Interview and analysis;
Eleventh interview	229
Twelfth interview	247

Thirteenth interview	268
Fourteenth interview	297
Fifteenth interview	323
XIV Conclusion: Toward a theory of reflection-in-action	353
Part three: addendum
XV The researcher's journal: A personal journey	378
Informed consents	395
Bibliography	405

Extract from Inviting Reflexivity into the therapy room. How therapists think in action.
Kuenzli, F. (2006) University Press of America, p iv.